

ABSTRACT

A method for distributing reusable storage containers and a distribution system for reusable containers. A plurality of reusable storage containers are obtained and one or more of the containers are offered for rent to customers for a period of time. The renting customer pays a deposit and takes possession of one or more containers. The customer later returns the container or containers, and makes a payment based on the duration of their possession. The reusable storage containers are available for rental from a plurality of outlets. The outlets include a variety of businesses. The containers are made of a variety of materials and cover configurations.

CinLibrary/1318941.1